

BUSINESS CASH MANAGEMENT

Business Cash Management

Cash Management is a set of online and automated tools that enable businesses to better manage and control their banking activity.

Bank of Eastern Washington's cash management solution is a module of the FPS Gold online banking platform that incorporates simple, yet sophisticated, banking capabilities and brings them to your desk or laptop computer. The service has exceptional security features, including secure messaging with the bank directly through internet banking, avoiding the usual internet email risks.

Business Cash Management candidates include companies that use a variety of electronic banking services, that need online access and control over their accounts, that actively manage account transfers, or that wish to establish a high degree of control over their disbursement process.

Account Management Features

Cash Management has robust account management features to include online statement, notice, research, image retrieval, and account history capabilities. Each activity is performed in a secure environment incorporating multi-factor authentication, passwords, and controls over the transactions and inquiries individuals can perform.

Electronic notices and statements are key features to allow prompt access to information about activity in your account. Email and SMS text notification of specific activity types can be turned on and off at your control.

Cash Management customers may receive, at no additional cost, a CD-ROM yearly that includes the year's bank statements and all activity on their accounts, to include checks, deposits, and other paper entries. This is a great tool to simplify the collection of information for your accounting or tax preparation professional. These CD-ROMs are password protected to safeguard business and personal information.

Business Bill Pay, Wires and ACH

Cash Management comes with the flexibility to originate payment and collection transactions in many forms, the most common being transfers between accounts within the bank, and transfers to external accounts through Business Bill Pay, wire transfers, or credit and debit ACH originations.

In many cases, a business' best transaction method is determined by its core accounting software package (Microsoft Money, QuickBooks, Standard Personal Finance, etc.). Business Cash Management has either an interface that works with your company's package or the flexibility of creating generic field delimited extract files.

Small businesses may find it more convenient to input transactions directly into Cash Management and maintain its payments, collections, and history within the product.

Security, Control, and Operations Needs

When setting up Cash Management, the bank will work with you to set the authorization and access levels for each function, allowing specific functions and tasks to be done by different people. For example, the monthly payroll file may be prepared by the human resources department, but the finance manager may be the one authorized to approve the file for processing.

Segregation of duties is critical for financial control, but flexibility is important. Bank of Eastern Washington will help map your internal controls within the Cash Management service to help meet your security needs.

Cash Management's internet based access and strong security readily supports remote access by the traveling executive or owner. Businesses may access the service 24/7, anywhere in the world, and can rely on our multifactor authentication security tools to properly validate your identity when the system is accessed from a "strange" computer.
